THE GOOD SHEPHERD

We are committing to memory the seven great I am sayings that are all found in the Gospel of John. We have looked at John 11:25, I am the light of the world. In upcoming weeks we will examine John 10:7, 9, I am the gate; John 6:35, I am the bread of life; John 14:6, I am the way and the truth and the life; and John 15:1, 5, I am the true vine. Today our attention is directed to John 10:11, 14, I am the door and the good shepherd. One very obvious feature of our text in John's Gospel is its connection to Psalm 23. Hendriksen observed, "Jehovah is the shepherd of Israel and of individual believers, who are regarded as the sheep. Jehovah is my shepherd; I shall not want, etc. (Ps. 23). So we thy people and the sheep of thy pasture will give thee thanks forever (Ps. 79:13). Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel, thou that leadest Joseph like a flock (Ps. 80:1). For he is our God, and we are the people of his pasture, and the sheep of his hand (Ps. 95:7). I myself will be the shepherd of my sheep, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord Jehovah (Ezek. 34:15; see the entire beautiful chapter). That sheep have a tendency to wander, and are, therefore in need of a guiding shepherd, is clear from Ps. 119:176; Is. 53:6."¹

I. THE SHEPHERD SUPPLIES (verse 1). "I shall lack nothing." The Shepherd's abundant provision is emphasized by the additional thought, "green pastures."² Jesus declares in John 10 that His sheep shall be saved, "and shall go in and out, and find pasture" (verse 9). The sheep find safety, liberty and sustenance. Every need is met by the Sovereign Shepherd. He supplies "abundantly" (John 10:10). The word is perisson, lit. to overflow, to have a surplus. The idea is to have more than is needed (comp. Romans 5:20). The Psalmist sings, "My cup overflows" (verse 5). "Jehovah is no niggard host, like the Pharisee (Luke 7:46); He provides for the joys as well as the necessities of life (John 2:1-11); His guests shall be of a cheerful countenance and a gladsome heart (104:15)."³ The sheep are the Shepherd's responsibility. There is no need that He will not supply, and He will supply it. Why could David say that? Because "the Lord is my shepherd." David was His. He called him by name (John 10:3). The sheep know the Shepherd and they recognize His voice,⁴ and He calls them by name (John 10:3). "I am the Good Shepherd, and I know My own, and My own know Me" (John 10:14). "My" shepherd, who knows "me" supplies my every need (comp. Philippians 4:19). But one of the great tragedies in our lives is blindness to true needs (Revelation 3:17). Instead, we too often stuff ourselves with the things of this world and our spiritual appetites are dulled. We shepherd ourselves into the wrong pastures – rather we stray like sheep seeking to fill our own needs – only to be disappointed. "Children of God, do you not fight against losing your own poor shepherdhood and bowing under Christ's glorious shepherdhood? Is it not fine that Jehovah will supply your necessities if it really becomes necessity within, and also true that you must condemn yourself for how you so easily avoid as a plague the great blessing of spiritual necessity? O God, make me to need Thee again, for then I shall meet Thee again, and my resulting proclamation shall be, 'I shall not want.'"⁵ Remember, the Good Shepherd will seek and find straying sheep.

II. THE SHEPHERD RESTORES (verse 3). "He restores my soul," shobeb, "signifies to bring back the soul that is as it were flown away, so that it comes to itself again, therefore to impart new life, . . . this He does to the soul, by causing it amidst the dryness and heat of temptation and trouble, to taste the very essence of life which refreshes and strengthens it.”⁶ David knew the need for restoration (comp. Psalm 25:7, 11; Psalm 32, 51). David stumbled and fell more than once. He committed adultery and murder. But God restored him. Indeed, Isaiah declares, “Yet the Lord longs to be gracious to you; He rises to show you compassion” (30:18). “Think of the parable which Jesus told. The shepherd has a flock of one hundred sheep. One is lost. What does he do? Does he say: ‘It has had all the provision I have made and ungratefully rebelled. Let it be’? On the contrary, he leaves the comfort of his home; he leaves his other sheep in the fold; he pursues his lost sheep ‘until he finds it’ (Luke 15:4). Then he brings it home ‘joyfully, not grudgingly (wretched beast, ungrateful creature!), but lovingly ‘on his shoulders.’ There is no burden too great for the good shepherd to bear. He will give his life for the sheep. Indeed, our Good Shepherd has done so (John 10:11, 17-18).”⁷ Peter is another example of restoration. His sin was grievous, and he wept bitterly afterwards (Luke 22:62). But Jesus sought him out (cf. Mark 16:7; John 21:15-22). Note Peter’s words in his first epistle, “And the God of grace, who called you to His eternal glory in Christ, after you have suffered a little while, will Himself restore you and make you strong, firm and steadfast. To Him be the power forever and ever. Amen” (1 Peter 5:10). The word translated “restore” is katartizo, lit., to put in order, to mend as in setting a broken bone. It is the same word used by Paul in Galatians 6:1 of restoring a fallen brother. The good shepherd (John 10:13) is “concerned” (melei moi, to be concerned about someone, to care, same word in 1 Peter 5:7) with the welfare of the sheep, even when, or especially when, they fall. “Who is a God like you, who pardons sin and forgives the transgression of the remnant of his inheritance? You will again have compassion on us; you will tread our sins underfoot and hurl all our iniquities into the depths of the sea (Micah 7:18, 19).”

III. THE SHEPHERD LEADS (verse 3). “He leads me beside quiet waters . . . He guides me in paths of righteousness for His name’s sake.” Notice that this is something the Shepherd does for the sheep, not merely something in which He instructs us. In John 10, Jesus declares, “When he puts forth all of his own, he goes before them” (verse 4). The NASB has correctly caught the force of the verb ekballo, “puts forth,” lit. to drive out. The word means to compel. “Left to themselves the sheep might not go in the right way, but the shepherd constrains them. He uses force if necessary to ensure that their best interests are served.”⁸ He directs “in paths of righteousness” (comp. Proverbs 4:11; 8:20; 12:28). The thought is that God directs in ways harmonious with His character. The sheep are not left to wander – and the direction and destination find their source in Him. Remember how the Apostle Paul urges the believer “to walk worthy of the calling you have received” (Ephesians 4:1). Knowledge of this calling determines the basis for the worthy walk. Thus the great need for knowing the Word of God. “All Scripture is God breathed and is useful for teaching, rebuking, correcting and training in righteousness” (2 Timothy 3:16). The Shepherd does this “for His name’s sake.” “Since ‘name’ is the equivalent of ‘character’ or ‘reputation,’ this beautiful little phrase means: He does all this because He has a reputation among His saints for faithful dealings with them, a reputation which must be cautiously upheld.”⁹ Calvin is quick to point out, “That, however, he may not ascribe anything to his own worth or merit, David represents the goodness of God as the cause of so great liberality, declaring that God bestows all of these things upon him ‘for his own name’s sake.’ And certainly his choosing us to be his sheep, and his performing towards us all the offices of a shepherd, is a blessing which proceeds entirely from his free and sovereign goodness.”¹⁰

IV. THE SHEPHERD PROTECTS (verse 4). God will lead and direct us in paths of righteousness, which at times will not be paths of ease and tranquility. There is no promise that God will not lead us into hard times. The trials of life will come (comp. Matthew 7:24-27 – the storm came upon the foolish and the wise). “Even though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death,” tsalmaveth, lit. valley of deepest darkness. Although this primarily has in view death as such (a Hebrew idiom), it also includes all of the dark and bitter experiences of life. “I will fear no evil for you are with me.” This of the last days of the Apostle Paul. Writing to Timothy from a Roman prison he says, “At my first defense no one came to my support, but everyone deserted me.” What a terrible experience! In the face of certain death he finds himself abandoned – or does he? “But the Lord stood at my side and gave me strength, so that through me the message might be fully proclaimed and all the Gentiles might hear it. And I was delivered from the lion’s mouth. The Lord will rescue me from every evil attack and will bring me safely to His heavenly kingdom. To Him be glory forever and ever. Amen” (2 Timothy 4:16-18). He has promised, “Never will I leave you; never will I forsake you. So we pray with confidence, ‘The Lord is my helper; I will not be afraid. What can man do to me?’” (Hebrews 3:5-6). “Your rod and your staff, they comfort me.” The shepherd’s rod and staff serve to not only protect the sheep, but also to direct them. “God is both correcting by affliction and upholding by grace; and the two combined are comforting.”¹¹

V. THE SHEPHERD CARES (verse 5). God richly blesses His people. “He prepares a table before me in the presence of my enemies.” The thought is similar to Revelation 3:9, God will make public His favor. The word translated “table” is shulchan, which refers to a large piece of leather (like a bedroll). Shepherds would carry supplementary pieces of choice vegetation to feed the sheep if forage was scarce or if some of the sheep were sick or injured and could not graze. “You anoint my head with oil.” In connection with this, A. G. Clarke writes, “At the close of the day the shepherd stands at the door of the fold ‘rodding the sheep,’ i.e., controlling them with his rod, and not only counting them as they pass in, but closely examining the condition of each sheep. Using olive oil and cedar tar, he anoints wounds, scratches and bruises, and refreshes the worn and weary by making them drink out of a large two-handled cup, brimming with water provided for the purpose.”¹² The Shepherd has come so that His sheep might have life and might have it abundantly (John 10:10) even in times of trial and suffering. “He tends his flock like a shepherd; he gathers the lambs in his arms and carries them close to his heart; he gently leads those that have young” (Isaiah 40:11).

VI. THE SHEPHERD PERSEVERES (verse 6). “Surely goodness and love will follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever.” The word translated “follow” is radaph, lit. pursue so as to overtake. The wicked are pursued by judgment (Psalm 35:6) and hunted by calamity (Psalm 140:11). It is as if the Good Shepherd had two sheepdogs, one named “Goodness” and the other named “Love,” and they will direct the sheep all the way home. It is because of the Shepherd that goodness and love are the possession of the sheep. His life, His death, secured these blessings for the sheep, and because of His death, God will always pursue His children. He will always persevere with them. He will always supply, restore direction, protect and care for His sheep. He will never lose any of His sheep (John 10:28, 29). He will bring all of His sheep home. “Never again will they hunger; never again will they thirst. The sun will not beat upon them, nor any scorching heat. For the Lamb at the centre of the throne will be their shepherd; he will lead them to springs of living water” (Revelation 7:16-17).

CONCLUSION: Sheep cannot take care of themselves. Unlike cattle, horses, or even pigs, sheep require constant attention. Note the emphasis of Isaiah 53:6, echoed by the Apostle Paul in Romans 3:11-18, “we all, like sheep, have gone astray.” It is not primarily the Shepherd’s role of providing comfort and protection that is being highlighted – rather it is the Shepherd’s sacrifice that underscores his unique function as the good Shepherd. C. H. Spurgeon remarked, “The position of this psalm is worthy of notice. It follows the twenty-second, which is peculiarly the Psalm of the Cross. There are no green pastures, no still waters on the other side of the twenty-second Psalm. It is only after we read, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? that we come to the Lord is my Shepherd. We must by experience know the value of the blood-shedding, and see the sword awakened against the shepherd, before we shall be able truly to know the sweetness of the good Shepherd’s care.”¹³ It could also be pointed out that Psalm 24 declares the glory of the King of kings and Lord of lords; Psalm 22 the suffering Shepherd smitten for the sheep; Psalm 23 the good Shepherd caring for the sheep; Psalm 24 the glorious and sovereign Shepherd in His Kingdom with His sheep. He is MY shepherd, “who loved me and gave himself for me” (Galatians 2:20). He has promised to care for me, as an individual, in every way and at all times. “May the God of peace, who through the blood of the eternal covenant brought back from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, equip you with everything good for doing His will, and may He work in us what is pleasing to Him, through Jesus Christ, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen” (Hebrews 13:20, 21).

⁴ The word translated “hear” is akouo (used with the genitive). “It denotes that the sheep hear the shepherd’s voice with understanding and appreciation. Note the significance of idia (his own). The shepherd does not call the sheep in general. He calls his own sheep, and he has a call that they recognize.” Leon Morris, The Gospel According to John (Eerdmans, 1971), p. 502. Likewise, B. F. Westcott notes: “Each ‘sheep’ has its own name. They are severally regarded not as simply units in a flock, but as having a peculiar character. In accordance with this conception, the word phonei (call) expresses personal address rather than general or authoritative invitation (kalei).” The Gospel According to St. John: The Greek Text with Introduction and Notes (rpt.
