Christ the Judge

The Apostles' Creed after declaring that Christ ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of God the Father immediately adds, "From thence He shall come to judge the living and the dead." The theme of judgment, as we shall see, is woven throughout Scripture (note specially John 5:22, 27 where we read that God who is the Judge of all has given all judgment to the Son).

"The reality of the last judgment does not preclude that at the end of our lives a decision will be made. 'He that believeth not is condemned already' and 'the wrath of God abideth on him' (see John 3:18, 36). The last judgment is the public and definitive confirmation of this.

"The view that a judgment is no longer to be expected cannot be based on a statement to this effect contained in the fourth gospel. This has frequently been done. Although there is a critical milestone in the present, there is also a critical milestone yet to be expected (see John 5:29; 12:48).

"There is no basis for the popular notion in some evangelical circles that suggest that the world's history constitutes already its judgment. It is a fact revealed by history – if we only take notice – that God's judgments fall upon this world. Indeed, what is sown will already be harvested in this life (cf. Gal. 6:7). This does not contradict that history is not the judgment, but cries out for the final judgment. The book of Revelation is replete with this. Not everything is set right at the present. However, believers know from the Word of God that he will pronounce judgment and do justice.

"Therefore the anticipation of the final judgment does not in the least contradict the execution of God's judgments at the time that precedes the end of the world.

"Note also that the final judgment is not the only judgment. But on the last day all books will be opened. All of us will have to admit that everything is as it is read from these books. Our consciences are turned inside out. They are objectified in the final judgment.

"We should not imagine the final judgment too humanly as a process involving accusation, questioning, and sentencing. We are dealing with a Judge who is omniscient.

"To be convinced of the gravity of the final judgment, it is not necessary to know precisely how everything will happen."¹

"The idea of divine judgment," writes Paul Helm, "is integral to the gospel. Take it away and what Christ did is essentially changed; in fact, what he did no longer makes sense."² You would think that professing evangelicals would be united in affirming this important truth. Think again. A growing number of people who proudly claim the label "Evangelical" have completely jettisoned the whole concept of divine judgment (and have re-defined the gospel in the process).³ The gospel (good news) proclaims salvation by Jesus Christ. What is salvation? It is rich in meaning and significance. It means a lot of things that imply blessing and joy. One of these is deliverance. Salvation does imply escape from danger. It does denote release or redemption. From what? Judgment. None of us relish being judged, and since we have an aversion to the thought of judgment, we tend to give it little or no thought – or worse yet, to dismiss the concept of divine judgment as a medieval concept that we need not concern ourselves with in our more enlightened age. Think again. The Scriptures speak loud and clear on this subject (and very frequently).⁴ Judgment is said to be supremely the work of God (Matthew 18:35; II Thessalonians 1:5; Hebrews 11:6, 12:23; James 4:12; I Peter 1:17, 2:23; Revelation 20:11, 12). This work is accomplished by Jesus Christ who has been appointed to this task (John 5:22, 27; Acts 10:42, 17:31; Romans 14:9). We are told that Christ will summon all before His judgment seat and judge them in strict justice according to their works (Matthew 25:32; Romans 14:9-13; II Corinthians 5:10; II Timothy 4:1,8; I Peter 4:5; Revelation 19:11-21). These works are the expression and product of the heart and extend even to the very words (Matthew 12:36) and secret purposes of the heart (Romans 2:16; I Corinthians 4:5). Everything will be revealed (Matthew 6:4, 6, 18; Matthew 10:26; Ephesians 5:11-14; I Timothy 5:24, 25). The norm for this judgment will be the entire Word of God in both the Law and the Gospel (Romans 2:12; Matthew 25:32; Acts 17:31; Revelation 20:12).

I. THE APPEARANCE OF THE JUDGE

The contrast between Christ's first and second coming is stated in terms of "weakness" and "power." His first appearance was, in the words of William Bate: "to be the mediator between the righteous God and sinful man, by patiently suffering the most afflictive evils; to propitiate the incensed justice of heaven against us; to restore us by humility who fell by pride; to illustrate his signal love to us, to recommend by the efficacy of his example, the meek suffering all the transient evils of the world: but the second will be to perform the last act of his regal office, to determine the eternal states of angels and men, and suitably in the glory of his Deity. The divine oracles were never less obscure than in describing the first and second coming of the Messiah; the eclipse of the Sun of Righteousness, and his future glory: and the most clear accomplishment of them in his humiliation, is a convincing visible argument they shall be fulfilled in his exaltation."⁵

II. THE MANNER OF HIS APPEARANCE

His personal appearance will be glorious. He will be attended with holy angels, and He will sit upon a visible throne of glory. The glory is the glory of His Father (Matthew 16:27).

III. THE PURPOSE OF HIS APPEARANCE

He will bring salvation (Hebrews 9:28) and execute judgment (Matthew 16:27; II Timothy 4:1). This day of God's judgment is described as majestic (II Thessalonians 1:9; Jude 14). "It is clear," says Leon Morris, "that the Judge is understood as a regal personage, as One whose appearance is awe-ful beyond description, as dispensing final justice with a royal hand. This great day is everywhere assumed throughout the New Testament. There are preliminary judgments of God throughout history. But at the end there will be the climax, that which proceeds out of the preliminary and partial judgments, and which perfectly fulfils all that they foreshadow."⁶

CONCLUSION: The Bible declares that those outside of Christ (in unbelief) are the enemies of Christ (Romans 5:10; 11:28; Philippians 3:18; Colossians 1:21; Hebrews 10:13). In Psalm 2 we read of the Son's anger and wrath and in Revelation 6:16 we read of "the wrath of the Lamb." Some people have a difficult time reconciling this startling image with that of the sweet and lovely Jesus they have grown so accustomed to hearing about. Jesus did come to seek and to save sinners (those deserving wrath). He came in the form of a servant and in humiliation to accomplish redemption (Philippians 2:5-11). Listen to John Calvin: "He appeared thus, then, to be made obedient in our name, as was necessary to satisfy for our sins. But now He will come to be Judge. He has been judged and condemned so that we might be delivered before the judgment seat of God, and that we might be absolved of all our sins. It will no longer be a matter of coming in such humility. He will come then with the Angels of His glory. That is what St. Paul meant by saying that the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ will be dreadful."⁷

⁴ Noted New Testament scholar, Joachim Jeremias, wrote: “The message of Jesus is not only the proclamation of salvation, but also the announcement of judgment, a cry of warning, and a call to repentance in view of the terrible urgency of the crisis. The number of parables in this category is nothing less than awe-inspiring.” The Parables of Jesus (Macmillan, 1972), p. 120.
